Tim Tremblay Races To First Win Of The Season At U.S. Air Force National, Lincoln Lemieux Thrills The Home Crowd In New York

Aurora, Minn. (February 6, 2017) Tim Tremblay raced to his first Pro Open win of the season on Friday night in Salamanca, New York, solidifying his position as the points leader in the class.

“When you’re the points leader you want to win races,” said Tremblay. I had the pace out there and it is too bad for my teammate, I was catching him and we were going to finish 1-2 but he had a problem and crashed hard. I feel awesome winning that race and I really want to thank my sponsors and the whole team.”

Lincoln Lemieux had been the star of the show right up until the closing laps. He qualified with first and second place finishes and was dominating the main event until the drive belt on his machine broke after land hard off a big jump. The result was a violent end-over-end crash that finished his night.

Although he dislocated his shoulder in the incident, Lemieux would find redemption on Saturday night racing to a third place podium finish in front of what can best be described as his hometown fans. A native of Vermont, the series only stop in the Northeast is as close as it gets for those who supported Lemieux while racing as an amateur.

Tim Tremblay also finished the weekend strong by winning both of his qualifying rounds where he picked up 10 bonus points for his efforts. Tremblay was again solid in the class final, finishing right behind Lemieux in fourth.

The New York stop always brings out a large presence of avid race fans. The team was able to meet with a number of them in person when we made stops at area schools to present two U.S. Air Force Race to the Future Scholarships.
